PARIS, KENTUCKY TUESDAY, JANUARY 1, 1907.

NUMBER 1.

We Wish You One and All a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

The year just closed has been a prosperous one for all—the merchant, the farmer and the printer. In our business rounds we find that our merchants generally have had a good year, and an unusually big holiday trade. Liberal advertising has had something to do with this and the News wants to express its gratitude to those who have so liberally given it its share of their advertising and job work. During the past year we have enlarged the News to accommodate our advertisers and have in every way tried to give them good results, and are glad to learn from many of them that our efforts were appreciated and that the results showed for themselves.

Our aim in the future will be to give you a newsy and interesting paper and he very latest in job work, and we trust you will still favor us with your patronage.

The News wishes one and all a happy and prosperous New Year.

Policeman Burke Assaulted.

Policeman James Burke went up on Eighth street last night about 10:30 o'clock and arrested some unknown colored man. While coming down Eighth street, with his prisoner, a supposed pal of the man under arrest sneaked up behind him and assaulted him with a pair of brass knucks, inflicting a severe scalp wound and the second blow breaking his nose. He fell to the street in an unconscious condition and both negroes made their escape.

Burke was found by some friends later and carried to Drs. Kenney & Dudley's office and as we go to press, after midnight, Mr. Burke had regained consciousness and was resting easily.

It was reported last night that his assailant was a negro desperado by the name of Albert Clay. He is well-known to the police and will no doubt be captured.

A posse was looking for him as we go to press.

Death of Mrs. Nannie Brown.

Mrs. Nannie Brown, aged 60 years, died at her home, on Main street, Friday night, of heart failure, after years of ill health.

Mrs. Brown has conducted a millinery and notion store in his city for many years and had many friends. She had been an invalid for many years, but bore her suffering with unusual Christ-like fortitude, and her death under the circumstances was indeed a sad one. Her daughter, Miss Jessie Brown, was at work on her books. Her mother, who was sitting in her chair, where she had slept for several years, being unable to lie down, became unusually still, and Miss Jessie called to her twice and receiving no answer rushed to her side and found that she had passed quietly into the eternal sleep. The screams of this devoted and self-sacrificing daughter caused two gentlemen to rush up the stairway from the street, and they remained with her until friends were notified and came to her. The love and beautiful attention by this young lady for an invalid mother for years, you might say sacrificing her young life in trying to give her every comfort, is worthy not only of mention but of emulation for the young girls of today.

Mrs. Brown was the daughter of the late Jas. McCann, and was a sister of Commodore McCann, of the U. S. N., who died two years ago at his home in New York, and of the late Charles McCann. She is survived by one daughter, Miss Jessie Brown, and three brothers and two sisters, James R. McCann, of New Jersey, the noted actor, of Toledo, O., and Ed McCann, of Richmond, Ky.; Mrs. Louise Hale, and Mrs. Carpenter, of Louisville.

The funeral occurred from the residence Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the services being conducted by Elder Carey E. Morgan, and the burial at the Paris cemetery. The pall bearers were James Stewart, J. A. Stern, J. B. Northcott, A. J. Winters, W. S. Ray and C. B. Mitchell.

We have the right goods at right prices. That's all.

TO THE PUBLIC.

During this happy season of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," I am mindful of the fact that the people of Bourbon and the adjoining counties have been exceedingly liberal in their patronage in the past. I am deeply grateful, and in announcing that in the future I will be found at the same old stand, I solicit a continuance of their good will.

I extend to all a wish for a Merry Christmas and Happy and Prosperous New Year.

The Country Press the Standby of Democracy.

This New Year is what is called an "off year" in politics preparatory to the great contest of 1908. But a few states hold elections and those will be of no great importance, except as showing which way the political wind blows. The year of 1907 is therefore a good time for propaganda work amongst those who need the gospel of Democracy preached to them. Every Democrat can do his share towards ushering in the Democratic millennium when "equal rights to all and special privileges to none" will be consummated. The first step is to support your local Democratic newspaper. It may not be all you think ought to be, but give encouragement to the editor and you will be surprised what improvement it will show. If he is struggling under a load all too heavy to bear, help him out by advancing a dollar or two on your subscription.

The greater daily newspapers are good enough in their way, but if you can afford but one paper the home one is indispensable. It is a digest of the doings of your community. It announces your birth, it chronicles your youthful doings, it narrates the story of your marriage, and in recording your death it suppresses your idiosyncrasies and magnifies your good qualities so that even St. Peter when you approach the "gates ajar" will exclaim, "good man you record for righteous deeds has preceded you and your sins are forgiven."

Who therefore that is a Democrat can fail to support the local newspaper that heralds to a waiting world the doings of himself and his community? Having subscribed and paid in advance you have the inherent right to express your opinion on the political events of the day and the editor will be glad to hear from you. The wise editor is the organ of public opinion and if he attempts to lead it, he generally is pretty sure of strong backing before committing the newspaper into untried fields.

The Democratic county newspaper is the watchman on the tower to guard the everlasting truths of Democracy, without it the people would have no fender and the grafters and corruptionists would have a free field without public criticism.

Democrats hold up the hands of the country editor.

The New Year.

The year that is passed, has forever gone. It has left us only the lessons of our experiences. If we profit from those experiences we can much better avail ourselves of the opportunities of the year before us. As the old year goes out, and the new comes in, we can engage ourselves profitably in taking count of stock.

Every person, no matter how humble his station in life, has an account balance. His thoughts, words, deeds and acts have counted for or against himself. If for he they stand to his credit. If against him, to his debit, debit means discredit. If to his discredit, he owns just so much to his friends, his community; and it should be, during the new year, his constant endeavor not only to cancel such indebtedness, but to place society under obligations to him. A man lives best when he places the world in his debt.

No person should be satisfied, moreover, with an evenly balanced account. If he has so lived that he has barely discharged his obligations to his fellow men, he has done more than he is morally compelled to do. If he has more, he has been a blessing to mankind, and thus fulfilled the highest purpose of his being. It should be the ambition of every man to make the world better so that his having lived will be a cause for gratitude to all who have been blessed by him.

The new year alone presents opportunities to all of us. Opportunities be seized when they come. Let us remember this fact, that the new year is a happy and prosperous one to all.

Tariff or Reciprocity.

The Department of State reports that the tariff struggle impending between foreign nations cannot be postponed unless the United States is willing to make reciprocal concessions on tariff rates with the countries involved in the controversy. This is, our tariff rates must be reduced if we expect to be regarded as a favored nation, otherwise the prohibitive rates of duty that Germany, France and other countries are about to put in force against those nations also exact the highest rates will be also charged on imports from the United States. The report says:

"It was not denied that governments like France and Germany were willing to make material concessions, but they insist as a condition upon such action that the United States should be prepared to show a similar degree of generosity. This latter phase of the case, it is said, will continue to be the stumbling block to all negotiations and that unless the United States overhauls its duties on European imports in such a way as to give them a chance in this country it will be futile to attempt to secure tariff favor from abroad."

What will our standpat statesmen do about it? Will they see our foreign trade with those countries destroyed by their impassable tariff walls, cause they dare not reduce the tariff that protects our own monopolists—the trusts and combines? There is no doubt that the tariff dilemma foretold by the democrats confronts the Republicans, for if they refuse to revise the tariff considerable foreign trade will be lost, on the other hand if they attempt to "tinker with the tariff," the whole scientific structure of protectionism will tumble about their ears and they would lose the campaign contribution from the trusts which they now enjoy.

Shaw is "Nutty" on Republican Prosperity.

Secretary Shaw has been a great advocate of Republican prosperity, but it now appears that he is getting too much of it, for he declares that "we who pray should ask God to save us from any increased prosperity; we have all we can stand." He further declares, "we are growing more crops than we can harvest and harvesting more than we can haul to market." He would do for Shaw to pray for chinch bugs and boll weevil and drought and rain in harvest time, but we trust such prayers would not be answered. But taking Shaw seriously may he not be "egging" to the fact that Republican prosperity is for the few at the expense of many who have to pay the high prices which the tariff fostered trusts are allowed to charge under Republican protection.

LOVERS' LUCK

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay

Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe

On a bright May morning as Barry O'Gill was crossing the fields by a well worn footpath, balancing a bag of meal on his back, he caught sight of Moira Nolan washing linen in the little river that bounded its way through the village of Ballymoran. The brook gushed and sang over its pebbles, and Moira's young voice sang with it as her white arms flashed in the clear water. She was on her limbs straight and supple as a willow, her face never streaked under her with only the rosy heels showing. The wind caught a strand of her hair and whipped it out till it shone like beaten gold in the sun. Barry paused, dazzled, and gazed at her, his mouth agape, his sack-of-meal forgotten on his back. Presently the girl was aware of his presence and that he was watching her.

"What are ye gaping at at all?" she questioned.

"At the loveliest girl in all Ireland," said Barry, never taking his eyes from her.

"Now be to ye if your mother knew it!" laughed Moira, bending to her work again. "And angry shiel be to find ye here. Ye'd best go back to her."

Barry flushed till his cheeks were redder than his hair. "It's here that I'll stop," he said decidedly, dumping down his sack and seating himself on the grass.

Moira's thirst had been a keen one, for all the village knew that he lived in fear of his mother's tongue. "Slurp, it's the sting of a wasp she has entered," was the verdict of her neighbors, from whom the Widow O'Gill held somewhat aloof, though now and again she condescended to call on Mrs. Terhune for a bit of gossip and a dish of tay."

Barry was Mrs. O'Gill's only child and the idol of her heart. Did he so much as look at a girl, Mrs. O'Gill was filled with alarm. So while the other lads lingered about the church steps after mass that they might see their sweethearts, Barry was hurried off homeward by his mother. Therefore it was with a sense of recklessness and novelty that he gave himself up to a talk with Moira. She bade him help her wring the clothes and then laughed at his awkwardness and splashed him with glittering drops. The time went quickly. It was noon before they knew it, and Barry sped home to his dinner and a scolding. Yet he hardly heard the words his mother heaped on him, so engrossed was he with the memory of Moira's gray eyes and the exquisite curve of her lips. Love comes swiftly when one is young in Ballymoran.

He and Moira met often after that, sometimes at the edge of the little river and sometimes on the roads by which the hawthorn hedges bloomed, a mass of pink and green. The more Barry thought of Moira the more he realized that his mother would never consent to his marriage. Moira's beauty was the only dowry the girl had. Of all the poor folk in Ballymoran she was by far the poorest.

Nor was Barry much richer. It was his mother who held the purse strings.

Once, in desperation, he thought of giving up Moira, and for three whole days he did not see her. Then quite by accident he met her coming across a field. She was about to pass him with averted face.

"Moira!" he cried brokenly.

At that she turned. She was pale and there were deep shadows under her eyes. All that Barry had kept pent in his heart rushed to his lips, and Moira listened, looking down and plucking at a bit of hawthorn she held in her hand. A lark rose from the long meadow grass near by, and soaring into the air purred out a song that seemed an echo of the ecstasy that was in their hearts. It was Moira who made the first return to earth.

"Does your mother know of it?" she questioned.

"Divvyle a bit," said Barry cheerfully, "and where would be the good o' telling her? She'd never consent to it in the wide world."

"Tis a runaway match we'll have to make, maunureen. We'll be after taking a thrip to the next parish and back some foine day."

"But where will we live at all, Barry, darlin?" cried Moira, still troubled.

"Best isy," said Barry; "I can make somewhat working in the bogs, and that will give us a bite and a sup. And there's owd McShane's cabin that's been deserted ever since he went to America. Troth, it's a ramshackle place, and there's no denying it! The roof flakes, but I can mend it with fresh turf. And though the room is as small as a nut, what a fine view we'll have from the doorway. And if the chimney is owd and smoky, after all, it'll be our own. Arish, trust to me, Moira, achar! And loves' luck, shure, it's the best of all!"

"Tis true for ye, Barry," agreed Moira, and happy and improvident, they drifted back into their loves' paradise, and one morning before the first birds were astir and Ballymoran lay in the cool grayness of the dawn they slipped away to the next parish. By the middle of the afternoon they were back again, and all the village knew of their romance.

Mrs. Terhune hastened to bring the news to Mrs. O'Gill, but the latter, pushing forward a chair, did not wait for her to speak.

"Have ye seen aught of my boy Barry?" she demanded. "The lazy gosson! Give me no more of it, or I'll have to speak to him."

The answer came promptly. "No, I don't think I should have any objections if the master's a-waiting."

lit of work has be done the day, badness to him!"

It was a fine opening for Mrs. Terhune, and, sitting on the opposite side of the hearth, she told her story, Mrs. O'Gill interrupting from time to time with passionate ejaculations. "The curse of all the crowds upon him! And sorrow to me for having a bawd, deceitful son murdering my heart with his cruel actions! May he never cross my threshold again! 'Tis a serpent's tooth he is, a serpent's tooth!"

Mrs. Terhune wagged her head wise-

"He is so," she agreed, with relish, "he is so! The most good for nothing lad in the parish, and he marrying the poorest girl of it! There's not a boy for miles around but what would have more sense! My children now, they're foins, clever lads, and, eads, woman, dear, it's often I've said to myself I'd be having such a great, awkwvry, stupid gallot for a son!"

But Mrs. Terhune had ventured too far. As she was speaking Mrs. O'Gill's face had flushed and then paled again. After all, Barry was her own blood of her blood and flesh of her flesh, and the mother in her rose, arm'd. Eyes and voice ablaze, she turned to Mrs. Terhune.

"Spare your pity," she cried breathlessly, "spare your pity! My boy has married where his heart led him, and if the girl is poor, so much the better. He is not like some I know, who spend their days hanging after the rich. Aye, ye may wince, Bridget Terhune, for ye know what I mean. Clever children, indeed! 'Tis myself that's thankfu to heaven that my Barry is not like your jailbird, knockabout oaths!"

"Twas like ye to come here with your spiteful words, and now, if ye've had your say, ye may take yourself off!"

But Mrs. Terhune had already gathered herself together and was stumbling down the road, muttering as she went. On the way she passed Barry and his bride, walking hand in hand toward the forlorn, tunnel-brown cabin meant to make their home. She went by them flapping like a wet hen, and they failed to recognize in her their saving angel. Instead, they looked fearfully about to where Barry saw a familiar figure approaching over the crest of the hill, a spare, keen eyed woman with a red shawl about her shoulders.

Mrs. O'Gill faced the enquirers grimly.

"Tis a foine hour for ye to be coming home," she cried sharply. "The supper's been set for the both of ye this long time, and 'twill be ruined ento-totely."

She gave Moira a piercing glance.

The last light of the afterglow touched the girl's face with a pale glory.

"'Tis a slim creature ye are," said Mrs. O'Gill, her voice softening.

"When I was a girl I had bright eyes, too, and the same color of hair. Ah, heaven be with them owd times! 'Tis long since I was young!" She turned from them abruptly and went on ahead, leading the way home.

The lovers followed in a happy daze, too overwhelmed to question how such fortune came about. "Did I not tell ye?" said the rapturous Barry, "that loves' luck is the greatest in the worlwd?"

He and Moira met often after that, sometimes at the edge of the little river and sometimes on the roads by which the hawthorn hedges bloomed, a mass of pink and green.

FOOS GAS AND GASOLINE ENGINES

Last longer and give better service than any engine on the market. Why? Because only the best material and workmanship that money can buy are used in their construction. They are the most accessible, simplest and easiest to operate of any engine sold today.

A few of the superior points are: The governor, with which you can change the speed while running. Economy of fuel, due to the construction of the valves and positive action of the governor. The igniter, which makes a spark one-half inch long: will start the engine on the first turn and is guaranteed not to foul. The balance weights on the crank shaft instead of on the fly wheels, which insure steady running and minimum of wear on the bearings. The lubricating system, and lots of others that we will tell you about if you will just give us a chance. We have samples on the floor and can give you a demonstration any time.

We also carry in stock a full line of Belle City and Ross Feed Cutters, the best of their kind. Kemp Manure Spreaders, Vehicles, Wagons, Implements, Seeds, Coal, Salt, etc. You need our goods and we need your money. Give us a call.

Interesting to the Ladies.

Judging from newspaper notices regarding Miss Courtenay Morgan in "A Woman of Mystery," which will appear at the Paris Grand on Friday, January 4, the critics especially the lady dramatic writers, of whom there are a great number in the field now, unite in pronouncing the wardrobe displayed by Miss Morgan as something remarkable. It was all collected in London and Paris, and to the thousands of theatre goers who do not pay an annual visit to those famous fashion centers the display of all these magnificent creations is a really enjoyable treat. The play is said to be splendidly mounted and a carefully selected company of players in support of Miss Courtenay Morgan, who will be favorably remembered as a former member of Charles Frohman forces. The engagement is for one night only and indications point to a very large attendance.

The Other Side.

By a vote of 188 to 106, the House of Representatives recently refused to increase the salary of its members. The House took this action notwithstanding members admitted that they could not meet living expenses and other demands incident to their positions on the $5,000 a year now allowed them. Indeed, several members declared that they were out of pocket in representing their constituents, and that the honors they received in no way compensated them. The House voted as it did, because a majority of its members believed that an increase in salaries would not meet the approval of the people.

This is one side of the matter, but there is another. If it is true that members cannot meet their living expenses and the demands made upon them on account of their positions, and that many of them are out of pocket in serving their constituents, the people of this country are willing to pay them all they are worth, though the amount be twice the present salary. The state gets a tax on the bonds by assessing a tax rate on the corporation that issues the bonds.

"When I see the truly marvelous development of Pennsylvania and its interests, I stand in wonder and amazement trying to find its cause. I say aside from the state's great natural resources, it is due to the wise, just and equitable tax laws it has on its statute books. Do you know that notwithstanding the cost of our new State Capitol Building—nearly $30,000,000—almost equal to the cost of the Congressional Library Building at Washington, the state paid for it out of its revenues and the state now has not a debt of any kind, but a surplus in its Treasury?"

The Kentucky Law.

How the effect of the tax laws of Kentucky is viewed by a prominent Philadelphia Banker is expressed in the following extract from a letter received by a well-known Louisville Banker, who recently was elected to the Vice-Presidency of one of the largest banks of that city:

"If you people can only get a just tax law in your state then you will assume a position you are entitled to and can maintain through the inherent wealth you have, but until you do, I, as a warm, and I may say enthusiastic friend of the state, see nothing inviting in your future. I wonder whether your law-makers have ever thought of what it would mean to the state and the inhabitants thereof if they could print a prospectus offering bonds issued 'Tax free in Kentucky.' Four words, but how much they mean. They mean that money owned by Kentuckians will be kept within the borders of their state and applied to the development of the state's interests. The state gets a tax on the bonds by assessing a tax rate on the corporation that issues the bonds."

"When I see the truly marvelous development of Pennsylvania and its interests, I stand in wonder and amazement trying to find its cause. I say aside from the state's great natural resources, it is due to the wise, just and equitable tax laws it has on its statute books. Mrs. Cole answered a little tremulously. "But, mother, they do want to marry her. Jessy might 'a' known she'd grow up so prim and high headed and hateful no man in his senses 'd ever want to marry her, and, land knows, women that don't marry have a hard time." Grandma Cole said to her son's neck widow.

"And who were the men, I'd like to know?" Grandma puffed, her throat swelling visibly. "Widowers with little children, or else one foot in the grave, or cranky old bachelors, or maybe even preachers. Besides, how can you know even a preacher wants to marry you unless he ups and says so? I never did hold with this way of makin' out every man that went to a house or even rode past it had a notion of goin' there comin'."

She paused in breathless triumph. If Mrs. Lem Cole had been wise she would have held her peace. Grandma bore controvert very ill indeed, and to prove her in the wrong was to risk everything. Mrs. Lem knew that very well, but a goaded woman is often a desperate one. Therefore she burst out: "Well! Three of the men—and they weren't widowers nor preachers, but real good chances—asked me to ask Jessy if she'd listen to 'em. And the other one!"

"There wasn't any other one. Maria, I don't believe one word you're sayin'!" Grandma broke out furiously. "Four proposals indeed! Why, Ann Liza didn't have but three in the whole of last year and the beans around her all the time like bees around a honey pot."

A Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiflammatory. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherry bark, Golden Seal root, Stone root, and other roots contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen Anne's lace, Black Cherry bark in promoting digestion, and by its nutritive flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe, obstinate, chronic coughs, bronchial and laryngeal troubles, and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most miraculous cures. Send for and read the little book of extracts treating of the properties and uses of the several medicinal roots that enter into Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and learn why this medicine has such a wide range of application in the cure of diseases. It is sent free. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. The "Discovery" contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drug. Ingredients all printed on each bottle wrapper in plain English.

Such persons especially those suffering from diseases of lung, heart, lung, are advised to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound copy.

Some Theories And a Bear Trap

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

"Andrew, something is goin' to happen. I feel it in my bones. I've got a theory that there's goin' to be awful doin's across the road tonight."

Father and daughter sat on the porch till the clock struck 9, and then the girl arose and entered the house to go to bed. That was his chance. He jumped down on the grass and ran for his bear trap and set it just inside the gate and ten minutes later was winding up the clock with an innocent expression a countenance calculated to deceive the cat.

"Now, why did father lug blind?" asked Jennie of herself as she went upstairs, and, poking her head out of a front window, she saw him engaged in some nefarious business on the path—something that she investigated fifteen minutes later and dragged to one side on the lawn.

The merchant had been detained. He had also forgotten that farmers retired to their beds when the hens went to roost. It was 10 o'clock when he came driving out. Jennie heard him coming and walked down the road to meet him. Knowing her father as she did, she knew that a present of a dozen new hoes that night would not suffice to soothe his injured feelings. It would be best to notify Mr. Barlow of this fact and turn him back and say, good night.

At about the hour mentioned above Uncle Peter roused up out of a dozen with a new theory. It was to the effect that some lightning rod men might come along in the night and seek to arouse the house for lodgings and step into that waiting bear trap. He was about to get up when he remembered that a man of lightning had cheated him out of $10 five years before, and he therefore decided not to budge. He had just come to this decision when old Mrs. Davis said:

"Andrew, I'm goin' to get up and go over to Scott's."

"What fur?" he dreamily asked.

"I've got a theory that Uncle Peter has lung himself in the wood shed."

"Nonsense!"

"Don't say 'nonsense' to me. I never had a theory yet that didn't turn out right. I'm goin' right over there, and if you hear me yell out you'll know what has happened."

She partly dressed and left the house. Jennie and Mr. Barlow and the horse and buggy were not so far away that she could not have made them out had she been less occupied with her theory, but as it was they escaped her notice. The wood shed to every well regulated house is in the rear. It was so in the case of the Scott home. To reach it old Mrs. Davis had to leave the straight path, and she hadn't made above ten steps when there was a scream and a long drawn yell to freeze the blood of all hearers. Uncle Peter heard it as he was beginning to dream of broken hoe handles and fat moles, and he jumped up of bed.

Old Mr. Davis heard it as he dozed and wondered about theories, and out of bed he came with his hair trying to stand on end. Jennie and Mr. Barlow heard it and started forward with exclamations of alarm, and thus it happened that the four reached old Mrs. Davis at about the same time. She had been caught in the bear trap, of course, in leaving the path she had stepped fairly into it, and as the jaws came together she felt, as she said afterward, that the last day had come and she was ready to sail away.

There was an exciting time for the next ten minutes. The poor old woman was frightened half to death, and a good deal bruised by the teeth of the trap, and while she was being carried across the road her husband was ascertaining his determination to have satisfaction under the law. Uncle Peter realized that his theory had failed, and Jennie and Mr. Barlow had been discovered conspiring as it were. It was not until the victim had been put to bed, her hurts attended to by a doctor and her husband calmed down by a promise that the right thing should be done that Uncle Peter turned on the young folks and demanded:

"Well, what you got to say about all this?"

"Nothing, father," answered Jennie.

"Nothing, Mr. Scott," added the merchant.

"Wall, I dunno as I have, either," observed the mole killer, as he jogged into the house and left the others at the gate to talk things over.

ASTRONOMY FOR LANDSMEN

How a Watch or Clock May Be Regulated by Observing a Star.

When some investigator makes the "discovery" that the points of the compass can be approximately determined by looking at the sun and using a watch to show the divisions of the plane it is apt to go the rounds of the press as something very peculiar. If this discoverer were sufficiently conversant with the principles of navigation to note for the public benefit that the running of a watch or clock may be regulated by observing a star he might confer some practical benefit. This is a very simple thing to do and might be of great use in a country place where accurate time is not always obtainable, but all that is necessary is a fixed location on the earth's surface and any old thing in the way of a timepiece.

Choose a south window from which any other fixed point comparatively near and high, such as a chimney, side of a building, etc., may be seen. To the side of a window fasten a piece of card having a small hole in it, so that by looking through the hole with one eye toward the edge of the elevated object some fixed star may be seen. Watch the progress of the star, and the instant it vanishes behind the fixed point the observer must note the exact time it disappears. Watch the same star the following night, and it will vanish behind the same object just three minutes and fifty-six seconds sooner. If the timepiece marks 9 o'clock when the star disappears one night it should indicate three minutes and fifty-six seconds less than 9 the following night. If several cloudy nights occur together, follow the first observation and deduct the product from clock time to find the time the star will pass.

Of course the same star can only be observed during a few weeks, for, as it gains nearly an hour in a fortnight, it will in a short time come to the meridian in broad daylight and become invisible. To make sure the observer is watching a star instead of a planet, he should notice that stars twinkle, whereas planets give a steady light because reflected, and, if he wishes further assurance, he may observe that all fixed stars appear to maintain the same relative positions with regard to each other, most noticeable with the different stars in the constellations, whereas a planet changes its place with regard to the other stars. This method of verifying time is easier and more reliable than the shadow on a sundial. In the famous observatory at Greenwich, England, from which longitude is counted, the clock by which chronometers are set is regulated in just about this manner, but over 200 of the fixed stars are observed. The observations are taken with a telescope across the center of which is the line of a spider's web to mark the meridian.—Marine Journal.

The English Longbow.

The range and power of the English longbow in its palmiest days were extraordinary, notes a writer in Chambers' Journal. We have seen and handled one of these bows, said to have been used at Flodden. It measured six feet unstrung and the arrow three feet. The pull must have been quite 100 pounds. To draw the cloth yard shaft on such a bow would probably defy the powers of even an exceptionally strong man nowadays. But good Bishop Latimer in his well knownology of English archery has shown us how from their boyhood Englishmen were scientifically trained in the use of the bow till, like Justice Shallow's hero, old Double, they could "clap in the clout at twelvescore yards." Up to what distance the old longbow was really effective is a question not easy to answer, but from the data we possess it may safely be assumed that against anything but armor of proof the cloth yard shaft was deadly up to 300 yards while for combined rapidity and efficiency in shooting no weapon could compare with the longbow till the introduction of the breech-loader.

Fellow Strugglers.

There were some things which the woman who had lived for twenty years in a beautiful but lonely spot within sight of the White mountains had borne just as long as she could, and she did not care who knew it.

"What a rest it must be to you at the end of the day's work to look at those great calm hills standing there in the waning light," said an enthusiastic traveler who had stopped for glass of water.

The inhabitant of Ridge Hill farm looked at her visitor with a hint of scorn in her face, although her tone was good natured enough. "I've looked at them hills just as many times as I'm ever going to when I'm tired," she said slowly. "I save 'em now for Sundays when I'm some rested up. When I'm mad and tired and ache all over I go out back and look at my tomato vines and potatoes. They've got good things to contend with here, same as I have. That's what soothes me more'n any hills."

A Bird That Shaves.

Man is not the only living creature that shaves. The bonmot, a South American bird, takes a dry shave regularly. The bonmot has long blue tail feathers. Each quill is adorned from base to tip with soft blue down. This arrangement the bird dislikes. Therefore with its sharp beak it nips the quills bare from the base out to about one inch from the tip, where it maintains a neat oval of soft blue whisker. Such action seems silly on the bonmot's part to certain philosophers, though it seems no siller than man's action in regularly scraping bare his cheeks and chin, while he maintains on his upper lip an oval of soft hair not unlike the bonmot's tail oval.

A GOOD NIGHT'S REST

"Speak for it!" she cried to doggie,
For she knew in her little heart,
That German Syrup, home's great treat,
Could health and joy impart.

The greatest tonic on earth is a good night's rest. Restless nights and the terrible exhaustion of a hacking cough are dread dangers of the poor consumptive. But why this fear of the night when a few doses of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup will insure refreshing sleep, entirely free from cough or night sweat? Free expectation in the morning is made certain by taking German Syrup.

We know by the experience of over thirty-five years that one 75-cent bottle of German Syrup will speedily relieve one of the worst coughs, colds, bronchial or lung troubles—and that, even in bad cases of consumption, one large bottle of German Syrup will work wonders.

What She Heard.

A South Main street lady had given her butcher her daily order over the telephone, and later in the day decided to change it a little and countermand an order she had given for some liver.

Ringing up her butcher she said: "You remember that I gave you an order for a pound of liver a while ago?" "Yes" was the reply. "Well, I find that I do not need it, and you need not send it." Before she could put down the receiver she heard the butcher say to someone in the shop, "Take out Mrs. Blank's liver. She says she can get along without it."

Our line is the best that's made. That's all.

Little Tommy was a student in one of the primary grades of the City School and he had gotten into the bad habit of making faces behind his teacher's back at school. He always prided himself on his smartness at never being caught, but he made an ugly grimace once too often.

"What are you doing, you bad boy?" demanded the wrathful teacher, flashing round and almost withering the lad with a fierce look.

"Oh, please ma'am," whimpered Tommy, "I was going to laugh, but my face slipped."
